Reese and Associates            Psychopaths (antisocial personality disorders) present the most complex and perplexing human behavior known to psychology. A life-long pattern of limited and inflexible behavior, they soon become predators in our society. These individuals are cunning, calculating, remorseless, and have little or no conscience when it comes to manipulating people and their environment. With no capacity to love, their selfish nature and egotistical approach to life, together with their impulsiveness, keeps them in constant conflict with the laws and values of society. Studies have shown that psychopaths continue to repeat their criminal activities. No one should interact with the ‘public’ without an awareness of this personality type. This presentation offers profiles of these offenders, early warning signs, indicators of danger, and suggests appropriate cautions. The concept of developmental psychology is introduced with regards to psychopaths, oppositional defiant disorders, and conduct disorders.

APRIL 20, 2010

7:30 - 8:30 a.m. Plaza Foyer	Registration
8:30-12:00 p.m. Plaza Ballroom	General Sessions  Internet Social Networking: What Schools Need to Know Chuck Cohen, Indiana State Police Steve DeBrot, United States Attorney  In May 2006, the Department of Justice announced its Project Safe Childhood initiative, which aims to enhance the national response to the growing threats to America's youth posed by online sexual solicitation, abuse, and child pornography. The United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Indiana is following through with a strategic plan to further this initiative, which includes providing education and training to professionals who work with children.  This session is intended to reach a broad spectrum of school personnel to enhance knowledge regarding the growing threats to America's youth posed by internet social networking. Topics will include sexting, cyber-bullying, immersive online environments and more. Presenters will discuss what school safety personnel should tell parents, teachers, and students regarding these issues. Presenters will also discuss what should be reported to law enforcement, and how it should be reported.  Metro Suite  Active Shooters in Our Schools: Critical Strategies for Administrators and Law Enforcement. Safe Not Scared (Pre-Registration Required) Jason Winkle, Indiana State University  This presentation is designed to help prepare school administrators, teachers, and law enforcement to deal with shooting incidents like the tragedies at Virginia Tech and others. Participants will learn the mindset required for surviving an active shooter encounter, active shooter doctrine for law enforcement, and understanding trauma and the aftermath. Participants will have the opportunity to ask questions that related directly to their school's needs and limitations. The importance of building relationships with local police departments and emergency management services will be stressed.  The second half of this presentation is an excerpt from the forthcoming book by Dr. Jason Winkle that examines the critical importance of striking a balance between preparation and denial. Schools have a responsibility to take reasonable steps to keep our children safe. However, many administrators and school safety experts struggle, not only with which safety measures to enact, but also with how those measures are presented and delivered. There is a fine line that must be walked to keep schools safe without scaring our faculty, staff, students, and parents. Dr. Winkle will address several areas where judicious decisions must be made with the type and the delivery of safety precautions. In this presentation, participants will have the opportunity to explore school safety precautions from a leadership perspective, examine contemporary research on fear and anxiety as it relates to school safety, examine "critical points" for achieving safety without causing fear or panic.
